Two Straight Flushes.

I played poker for 12 years and never saw a straight flush. A few nights ago a woman in a millionaire's row palace held one and, disdaining the small pile of cash on the table, called for her check book. Everybody except an old bachelor who had learned the game in the Union club laid down. He, scorning to take advantage of a weak woman, said:

"Mrs. B., let me advise you to be careful. I shall see you for any amount and raise you. The limit is off, I suppose?"

She said it was and cast a check for $500 in the pot.

"Before I see that may I ask a question?" he said to the assembled players. "I want to know this—in case there are two straight flushes, each ace high, which suit wins?"

"Diamonds," was the unanimous reply.

He handed to Mrs. B. her check and, laying down a ten, jack, queen, king and ace of diamonds, remarked that she was a very brave woman. But she assured him that her hand was worth $500 and exposed a ten, jack, queen, king and ace of clubs.

"How far would you have gone?" some one asked her, to which she made answer:

"I shouldn't have thought of stopping under $5,000, and I am half angry that he didn't give me a chance to bet. It's such glorious fun!"—New York Press.

Infant Baptisms in Russia.

"It was fortunate enough," writes Trumbull White, "to visit the Church of St. David, in Tiflis, Russia, just in time to attend a baptismal ceremony. According to the rites of the Greek church, as practiced in this ancient Georgian temple, the youngster in question, a boy 6 weeks old, had to be immersed three times in a baptismal font filled with water, each time to be completely covered, in addition to various blessings and anointings with holy oil and several long prayers.

"The benevolent looking old priest proved himself a man of kindly thoughtfulness. While the family group around the baby was getting him properly undressed, for the ceremony requires that the child shall be naked, the priest surreptitiously dipped his finger into the font, and I saw by his face that it was too cold. Then he stepped behind a screen, where his samovar was steaming, emptied the hot water into a pail, and while the family still kept busy over the baby he poured enough to temper the pool that had been provided for the shorn lamb. The result was that the little fellow took his plunges without a murmur and without distinguishing himself."—Chicago Record.

"Paradise Billed Down."

A tourist tells how he traveled with a young couple evidently on their honeymoon. The party consisted of a particular carriage were on the grum most of the time over their antics. The bride had got the man she loved, and she didn't care who saw her put her head on his shoulder. The bridegroom had not got a far from his wife, and if he wanted to feed her on sweets or squeeze her hand, whose business was it?

A little old man sat directly opposite the couple, and he looked at them so often that the young husband finally explained:

"We've just got married."

"I knowed it all the time," chuckled the other.

"And we can't help it, you know."

"No, you can't. I'll be blown if you can."

"If I presume it all seems very silly to an old man like you," continued the husband.

"Does it?" chuckled the old fellow. "Well, I can tell you it does not, then. I've been there three times over, and now I'm on my way to marry a fourth. Silly! Why, children, it's paradise billed down!"—London Fun.

Old London Sundays.

We have got it into our heads that Sunday was better observed in the puritanical acceptance of the word three or four generations back than it is now. It was quite otherwise. All the great ladies when Queen Victoria came to the throne—the Duchess of Wellington, the Duchess of Rutland, the Marchioness of Salisbury, the Lady Hyde Parker, the Misses Walpole—had regular card parties on a Sunday. And there were concerts and receptions all over the town announced with becoming regularity in The Morning Post—Saturday Review.

How to Get a Good Dog.

A vagrant dog, particularly a cur with seven or eight different strains of common dog in him, is the best kind of dog to own. He is always smiling and wagging his tail at you, and his appreciation of little favors is only equaled by his appetite. A fancy dog with a blue ribbon around his neck is always looking for an opportunity to snap at a child. If you keep a dog, we would keep a yellow dog purchased as a pup from a negro boy—Arlson Globe.

A Coffee Hint.

A French housekeeper says that in her country it is an invariable rule to add a little butter and powdered sugar to coffee beans while they are roasting. A very small piece of butter is needed to the pound, a bit perhaps as large as a hazelnut, and not more than a teaspoonful of powdered sugar. This treatment is the secret of the pleasant burned sugar flavor in French coffee.

Like unto Like.

"And love restored his reason," said the sweet young thing in concluding her story.

"It is the first time," returned the old bachelor, "that I ever heard of insanity curing insanity!"—London Post.

Easterners have an erroneous impression about the vast plains country that stretches eastward from the banks of the Rockies to the western side of the Dakotas. It is a region where crimes are far less numerous in proportion to population than they are in the densely settled regions of the eastern and middle states.

If the sombreroed ruffians with pistols and knives in their boots and cartridge belts around their waists are in the cattle country, where they are they to be found? Where are those Alkali lakes, Laciel Bills, et al., who fire at the deer in the barrens and at the alkali bars of tenderfoot strangers—the villainous desperadoes whose tramping bees and other lawbreaking makes up considerable of the stock in trade of our eastern comic illustrators? I do not know.

For many years I have wandered through the great northwest on horseback, stagecoach and on foot, as well as in the palatial Pullman sleeper of the great transcontinental lines, and I have never discovered any of the fierce, bewhiskered dime novel heroes. During all my travels in the Dakotas, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon and British Columbia I have never seen a man hurt or witnessed any sort of row, and I would feel much safer to travel across the mountains or plains alone on a broncho and unarmed than I would to walk up Clark street at night in Chicago.

"Sweet Bells Jangled Out of Tune."

How much of woman's life happiness is lost for lack of harmony. A hundred melodious tones ruined by one little note of discord. Women who ought to enjoy the perfect happiness of love and wifehood and motherhood are miserable from one year's end to the other because of some weakness or disease of the system, or delicate organization of the nerves, which make a jangling dissonance of so many lives, are not by any means completely eradicated under judicious treatment.

There is no need of repugnant examinations of the most obtrusive kind, which cure the troubles of the feminine organism positively, completely and permanently.

For nearly 30 years Dr. R. V. Pierce has been chief consulting physician of the Invalids' Hotel and Sanatorium, and a perfect command of the human body, free of charge, sound, professional advice and suggestion for self-treatment by which 90 out of 100 cases of female complaint, even of the most obstinate kind, may be completely and permanently cured. Address him as above.

"While Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures the troubles of the feminine organism positively, completely and permanently, it is an eminent and delicate cure specialist in this particular field of practice. Any woman may write to him for a perfect command of the human body, free of charge, sound, professional advice and suggestion for self-treatment by which 90 out of 100 cases of female complaint, even of the most obstinate kind, may be completely and permanently cured. "One day I was talking fish with a number of friends," said an old fisherman, "and I made a bet that I could catch more perch than any other man in the party in a given time. The crowd picked out the most experienced fisherman in the lot, and we set a day to try our luck. The day before the match I got a large glass jar, filled it with water and put some minnows in it. Over the mouth of the jar I put a piece of parchment in which I had made some small holes. Then I went to a point just east of the waterworks, picked out a likely spot and sank the jar in the river, first attaching a cork float to it by which I could locate it next day.

"We went out for the fishing match the following afternoon, and I soon found my float and anchored there. The other man located a short distance away, and we began. The perch were just beginning to run, and in a little while I had pulled in 180 perch, while my opponent got only 24. Then he gave up, and I won my bet.

"I showed the boys the trick before we left the fishing ground. You can always find it that way, make a good catch of fish that will swallow minnows. The sight of the bait in the jar always attracts a crowd of fish and seems to put them in good biting humor."—Detroit Free Press.

Magnetic Clay.

Most kinds of clay contain a considerable proportion of iron. The red color of bricks, for example, is due to the presence of oxides of iron. Whenever an object molded of clay is baked at the temperature of the potter's furnace in the presence of a magnetic field or influence, the otherwise homogeneous clay shows when cooled traces of magnetism in a definite direction. This inherent magnetism is sufficient to show the direction and give an idea as to the intensity of the magnetizing force that acted while the clay was in the furnace.

This peculiar property has been used to solve some questions of great interest to scientific people in general. An accurate knowledge of the direction of the earth's magnetic force in early historical times has been deduced by several Italian physicists from study of the traces of magnetism shown by Etruscan vases and other objects of clay exhumed from old tombs. The conclusion reached is that the direction of the earth's magnetic field has varied very greatly in the 5,000 or 6,000 years represented by the age of the objects examined.

The Strains They Suffered.

For exercise in expression the teacher daily asks her scholars to describe some of the happenings of the day at home.

Little Mianla, Lollipop: "When my papa went to go down into the mine the other evening, where it was dark, he slipped on the stair and strained his foot, and now he can't walk."

Here another little girl was evidently reminded of something, and she related her hand and fingered it to get the teacher's attention.

"Well?" suggested the teacher.

"Papa, papa, when our cow came home from pasture last night she slipped in the mud right in front of the house and strained her milk, but she is able to walk just the same!"—Lewiston Journal.

Home Life in Porto Rico.

To one unaccustomed to tropical conditions the furnishings of the Porto Rican home would at first sight seem meager, but it is quite ample. A short residence will demonstrate that nearly 500 years of experience with the unpleasant features of life in the West Indies have been crowned by a survival of the fittest in home furnishing and interior matters.

Austrian bent wood furniture and also wickerwork and willow ware constitute the main equipment of the parlors and living rooms. Upholstered furniture is unknown and undervalued, little or no attempt being made at decoration except in the matter of embroidery and fine handmade lace work. Hundreds of yards of crochet work are used in the embellishment of a single canopy bed. This work is the chief delight of the Porto Rican housewife.

The walls are for the most part bare, but here and there a painting of merit may be seen. The sofa pillow is the one great feature of the home. It is everywhere, in every conceivable size, shape and material. Pawns of gigantic size and exquisite formation, as well as broad spreading palm leaves, are used to festoon the walls and arched doorways. Cut fresh from day to day, they render the dark, cool rooms inviting and attractive. Potted tropical plants in great variety abound within and without the house—Harpers' Bazar.

They cannot inveigle their elders into seeing things their way. The following is an instance of where a little girl slipped up on this by not taking into consideration that her mother had had enough experience with children to have an insight into their nature.

The girl's birthday was a couple of weeks off, and her parents had told her that they were going to give her a handsome present upon that occasion. She had been counting "the minutes" for several days, but thinking she could not possibly await her birthday without knowing what her present would be she stole softly up to her mother and begged her to show her the present.

"Why, it wouldn't be right to show it to you now," her mother answered, "because we want to surprise you on your birthday."

"Oh, that's all right!" exclaimed the little one. "I'll forget what it is before then."

Baby's Overplus of Brains.

"Oh, John," exclaimed the fair young mother, "I am glad you're home. I have been so worried."

"Why, dear," he asked, "what's the matter?"

"It's about the baby. I tremble to think of it. You know they say children that are too smart never grow up."

"Yes, yes," he cried, "go on. What is it? Where is our darling? What has happened? Go on."

"John," she said, putting her arms around his neck and sobbing upon his breast, "he said, 'Da, da, today, and he is only 9 months old.'—London Tit-Bits.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS

SAURIN.

The weather last week was remarkably cool. People driving a distance donned their heavy coats and wraps. Slight frosts did some damage to the gardens.

A gale set in on Friday morning and continued till Saturday afternoon, hurrying clouds of dust in its track. The steamer City of Toronto, tried to leave Midland but had to return owing to the severity of the gale.

During the gale on Friday last, the water in Midland harbor was so high and rough that all work was stopped along the docks and the elevators closed down. A boat with a summer resort house built in it was driven by the wind and waves up on the line of the track, which track in calm weather is several feet above the water.

There is now a fast line of coaches running on the R. P. R. between the city of Toronto and Penetang, which is a great boon to tourists, as it makes connections with the boats.

The long continued spell of dry weather came to an end July 3. A copious shower of rain fell which refreshed vegetation and cheered the foaming country.

The Center of the Earth.

Of late years the general view has been that the interior of the globe, though partly liquid, is for the most part solid. Some have considered that a section through the earth would show the following:

(1) An outer solid envelope, (2) a semifluid envelope, (3) a fluid envelope, (4) a semifluid envelope, (5) a solid core. No. 1 results from a reduced temperature only. No. 2 from a pressure and temperature not quite sufficient for liquefaction. No. 3 from a pressure sufficiently high to produce complete liquefaction. No. 4 from a pressure so great as to prevent even the terrible heat which certainly exists deep down in the earth from completely liquefying the material on which it works, and No. 5 from a pressure which overcomes completely the liquefying power even of the maximum heat of the interior.

This pressure is estimated to be at the center of the earth 7,180,593,750 pounds to the square foot, a pressure so enormous that no known substance could fuse beneath it. Even hydrogen at the highest possible temperature would under such conditions become as hard as a diamond. Hence it seems probable that, far from there being a vacuum at the center of the earth, there is a basis of intensely solid matter there.

He Wanted a Drink.

Some years ago Colonel Crisp was in New York, and being in attendance at a certain notable political gathering in Madison Square Garden was called upon for a speech. And did he accept? Well, rather! Running his fingers through his hair, adjusting his vest and pushing up his coat sleeves, he started in to sprinkle eagle feathers all over the stage. Now, the colonel is a stout man and has a thirst in proportion. In the course of his passionate harangue he became very warm and asked that some water be provided. In compliance with the request a diminutive pitcher and dainty little glass were brought and placed before him.

Colonel Crisp looked at it intently for a few moments, and then "What is this?" he thundered. "W-w-water," timidly answered one of the vice presidents.

"Young man," thundered the colonel, his nostrils quivering with suppressed rage, "either bring me a bucket and a gourd or lead me to the branch."—Kansas City Independent.

Rupert—it was a strange case! He left the club one night to go to the opera and was never seen or heard of afterward.

"I'm old—disappeared as completely as if the earth had opened and swallowed him up, eh?"

Miss Eliza:—Well, you might mention to your father that I would not be averse to accepting a position as mother to his only boy.—Chicago News.

Not of That Nationality.

The Londoner tells the story of a gentleman who was much annoyed by having his head pinched during the operation of hair cutting. The barber apologized and explained that there was an unusual bump there.

"Are you a phrenologist?" asked the patient.

"No, sir," answered the barber. "I'm a Swede."—London Globe.

Some Figures.

"You say that figures don't lie? Well, permit me to flatly contradict you."

"May I ask your business?"

"I'm a dressmaker."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Sawdust Graduates.

Most of the circus acrobats and not a few of the rough and tumble comedians of the stage who have graduated from the ring were reared and learned the rudiments of their business in the lumber towns of the northwest. In the "sawdust towns" on account of the saw-mills, which are their chief industry. There are many of these in Wisconsin and Michigan and several in Iowa that have earned out of the circus acrobats and tumblers in the business.

In the "sawdust towns" the small boys have exceptional facilities for learning to turn somersaults and land springs in the great beds of sawdust that surround the mills. Soon they begin to try the more difficult feats they see done in the shows that visit the towns. After school hours they tumble until it is dark and then they do the "chokes." From out of them all there generally rise two or three boys who get the knack of the acrobatic feats, and these work in constant rivalry, each trying to excel the other.

One day along comes a circus, and the best boy tumbler applies for a job and shows what he can do. Perhaps he is given a chance as a "top mounter," or the top man in a pyramid act, because he is light and active. When he gets older, heavier and stronger, he may become an "understander," or the man who holds a mountain of men on his shoulders. And thus he gets to the show business.—Exchange.

Do You Eat Out or In?

The number and variety of knives and forks that now grace a well equipped and formal dinner table may well dismay one unused to such a variegated display of cutlery and silver. There are forks for the oysters, for the fish and for the roast and forks as well for anything else that may be served. There are also knives to correspond to the forks that may be needed. These implements that social convention decrees to be necessary to convey food to the mouth are usually laid out in formidable rows on either side of the plate.

The other evening a simple western maiden at her first eastern dinner surveyed her supply of knives and forks with growing trepidation. Her common sense told her that they were laid out in the regular order in which it was intended that they should be used, but nothing in her experience had taught her which was the right end of the row to start in with. Finally, in despair, she sought help from her next door neighbor, a pretty boy anxious to see Sir Algernon, who was their secretary.

"Say, doc," she questioned anxiously as she pointed at the offending objects, "do you eat out or in?"—New York Tribune.

Wanted to Warn Him.

Sir Algernon West tells this story in his "Recollections." One day the late Sir George Campbell, who had a very good opinion of his own powers, called on Sir Algernon, who was their secretary.

"I'm dead sure, and I'll go ask him if you say so."

"I didn't say so because I didn't care a continental, and the boy went on with his descriptions of the people on the train. At last I asked him what he thought I was. I had on a pretty flashy suit of light stuff and was thinking I was looking pretty well, so I was willing to risk the boy's venture. He looked me over for a full minute very carefully.

Cattlemen or Gamblers.

"One day last fall," said a well known Montana capitalist, "I was riding on a train in my state and got to be on pretty fair terms with the train boy by buying a few of the things he had to sell. It was not a very formal kind of a train, and when the boy had finished his rounds he came over to sit with me and 'suck' me," as he said. I was willing enough, as he was a sharp lad and there was nobody else to talk to, and he went right at things.

"Do you know," he said, "that I can tell by looking at a man mightier than what he is. Now, there's that fellow over there in the corner, he's a Chicago drummer. I can tell him by the way he lets his money go and the flip style he has when he talks to people. And that chap over there with the silk hat, he's a preacher from a country town. I'm dead sure, and I'll go ask him if you say so."

O'Connell and Massey.

Laughter has been fatal to at least one bill in the house of commons. In the days of O'Connell Thomas Massey, who was a sworn foe to everything that suggested popery, introduced a bill to abolish the suffix "mas" from all words in our language and to substitute "fide," thus converting "Christ-mas" into "Christ-fide," and so on.

When he had ended his introductory speech, O'Connell got up and said: "Since the honorable member has such an insuperable objection to the word 'mas' why does he not set a good example by anglicizing his own name?"

In that case we should be quite willing to speak of him as Thottide Tideo." The house rolled with appreciative laughter, and Mr. Massey never recovered sufficient courage to speak of the bill again.

Strange Affairs.

"It is shameful the way Marmaduke McCorker has treated Miss Fitzpatrick."

"What did he do?"

"Oh, he stimulated her to improve her mind and then broke the engagement on the ground that he was afraid to marry a woman who knew so much."

What He Would Fear.

"I don't think," said the observant boarder, "that I should care to propose to a girl admitted to photography."

"And why not?" asked the cross eyed boarder.

"I should be afraid that she would seize the opportunity to develop a negative."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

No More Troops to be Sent to China at Present.

The Diplomatic Relations With Great Britain.

Washington News of Interest to Canadians.

Special Correspondence of the Tribune.

Washington, D. C., July 9, 1900.—President McKinley, alone of all the heads of the great nations which have interests in China, has left his capital and gone home for a vacation, after refusing to send more troops or take any more prominent part in the rescue of the imperial diplomat at Peking or in avenging their murder, if need be. With the single exception of Japan, the United States is the only power that has a large veteran army in perfect readiness within striking distance of Northern China, and severe criticism of the President's attitude is already making itself heard. Of course his action is due to politics and to the fear of losing votes to Bryan and the anti-imperialists by any action that could be construed as a further step beyond our own boundaries. McKinley is naturally a hesitator, and no one has yet discovered by what line of thought he has induced to order the Ninth Infantry so promptly to China a week ago. It is now the fact that he sent any troops at all, and not his refusal to send more, that excites surprise.

An article purporting to give a history of the events that led up to the present friendly understanding between the United States and Great Britain has been published in one of the July magazines by M. A. Low, a well-known Washington correspondent, whose facilities for obtaining information causes much confidence to be placed in anything that he may assert. After giving an interesting sketch of the history of the incident, when the thundering of Ambassador Bayard came near landing the two countries in a war which was only averted by the diplomacy of John Hay, now Secretary of State, Mr. Low relates, in detail, the diplomatic history of the Spanish war. Nor once, nor twice only, according to Mr. Low, did England stand between the United States and the concert of Europe in the negotiations leading up to hostilities. Even after this war was over, the attempt made by Spain, backed by Russian sympathy, to sell the Philippines to Germany came near causing war between the United States and the latter power, and was only averted by the action of Great Britain. Mr. Low is an Englishman by birth, and it is possible that race sympathy has caused him to be so biased in his large share in these events, than she actually took, but the general belief is that his account is remarkably close to facts.

"Few people realize the vast proportions to which commerce on the Great Lakes has grown," said F. X. Hemmingsway of Buffalo, who is in this city. "It makes up what we lack in American-botton ocean-carrying trade, and is yearly growing to be of more importance. The demand for tonnage last year was so great that a large number of vessels started from Buffalo for Duluth even after the insurance companies refused to accept them as risks because of the lateness of the season. Some of them made the trip in safety, and others didn't. Several vessels were caught in the ice and lost. Others had to winter at the Soo, while still others were forced to make harbors wherever they could, sending their cargoes on by rail. The prospects for this year are better than before. All vessels are now busy, carrying coal up and ore down, and a vessel famine is feared when the moving of the wheat crop begins. All this, though, means prosperity for the vessel owners and for everybody connected with the lake carrying trade, and I haven't the least doubt but that the American enterprise will supply the ships to take care of the growing commerce."

Sir William Martin Conway, the noted hunter and explorer, arriving in this country a few days ago on his way to Bolivia, where he expects to explore in the Andes. He has been a wide traveler. In 1889 he spent nine months in Egypt and the East, and in 1892 in the Himalayas, climbing a peak 23,000 feet high and surveying 2,000 miles of mountains. He traversed the Alps from end to end in 1894, and explored the interior of Spitzbergen in 1897. In 1898 he explored and surveyed the Bolivian Andes, ascending Sorata (21,500 feet) and Illimani (21,200 feet). He also ascended Aconcagua (23,000 feet) and explored the glaciers of Tierra del Fuego. In speaking of his plans, Sir Martin said: "I have come over to continue my explorations in the Andes, which began in 1888. I intend to do no high climbing, nor do I expect to visit practically unexplored country. Two years ago I explored and surveyed the west slope of the Andes. I have come back to explore the east slope. I will do no climbing, but I intend to explore the interior of the Andes, and in certain places I left blank spaces. I am going now to explore those unexplored regions and complete the map."

Comparisons instituted between Sir William Martin Conway, head of the naval construction Bureau of the British Government, who was recently relieved from his office, and Admiral Hichborn, chief constructor of the United States Navy, calls attention to the striking differences in pay on the opposite sides of the water. Rear-Admiral Hichborn and Sir William White have a good deal in common. Each started life as a shipwright's apprentice. While in the Deseront dock yards, Hichborn in the Boston navy yard. Each worked his way up step by step. They are about the same age, resemble each other in personal appearance and manner of speech, both being direct, jovial, plain-spoken men. While the British official received about $20,000, the chief constructor of our navy is paid but $8,000. Rear-Admiral Hichborn has devoting upon him the same responsibilities and tasks which are attached to work the British chief constructor. At present he is directly responsible to the Government for the design and construction of 70 ships of war, embracing all types, from battleships to torpedo boats. Rear-Admiral Hichborn and Sir William White have maintained a close personal friendship for many years, and the former felt a keen sorrow over the retirement of the British constructor, who felt that the demands of his position were too great for his health, which had broken down under the stress of a serious accident to the Queen's yacht, for which, while he was not personally responsible, he was severely criticized.

Uncertainty as to the status of patent and trade-mark owners in the territory acquired by the United States in the war with Spain has been relieved by an order which directs that in territory subject to government by the military forces of the United States owners of patents which have been issued, or which may hereafter be issued, and owners of trade-marks, prints, or labels duly registered in the United States Patent Office, shall receive the same protection as is accorded them in the United States under the laws pertaining thereto. The order is applicable to Cuba, as well as to the ceded territory of Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. All that is necessary is to have the patent or trade-mark letters registered in the colonies, which can be done at a cost of $5 each, through the office of E. G. Siggers, Patent Lawyer, Washington, D. C.

The Advantages of a Finnegan Tubular Axle Over a Solid Steel Axle.

In comparison to the Solid Steel Axle, the Tubular gives a much greater circumference and larger bearing, which, on average roads, is well understood to make the draught of the wagon very much lighter.

The Iron or Steel Axle, from its very slight taper, when set to bring the wheel to a plumb spoke, is not level on the bottom side, but inclines down at the point, causing great friction and consequently heavy draft. The best Solid Axles sooner or later crystallize and break near the collar, whereas, for well-known mechanical principles, a wrought steel tube, such as the Tubular Axle is made of, can never crystallize.

The Tubular or Hollow Iron Axle is recognized by all mechanics as far superior in strength to square or round steel, or iron of the same weight per foot, and is due to the principle of the arch, which is generally understood.

The Advantages of a Finnegan Tubular Axle Over a Skein.

In comparison to the Thimble Skein, to which we must concede the same advantage of large circumference over the Solid Axle, as above stated, for the Tubular, when properly set, to bring the wheel to a plumb spoke, it is level on the bottom side of the bearings, and having never to exceed one-fourth inch gather, allows the wheel to run straight and free on soft, muddy or smooth roads, with the least possible resistance, while the Thimble Skein, owing to its very great taper when set as above, has a bearing which is not level in the wheel, but is inclined up at the point, causing great friction as above stated. This both Solid Axles and Thimble Skeins lose the vast advantage of the Tubular, which has a level bearing in the wheel.

The Tubular Axle Spindles are finished as round and true as the finest Coach Axles, while all Skeins must, from the process of their manufacture, vary in size and be imperfect in shape, causing more or less friction and heaviness of draft.

The Advantages of a Finnegan Tubular Axle Over a Wooden Axle.

Tubular Axles, of course, can neither decay nor warp as Wooden Axles frequently do, destroying their "set" and again adding to their draft.

The Tubular Axle being made of steel, hammered while very hot, under a spray of cold water, gives a bearing so smooth and so hard that years of use show no appreciable wear.

They are provided with cast boxes of the best quality of gray iron, which gives them the advantage of the well-known principle, that two metals of different textures, wearing upon each other, do so with much less friction than when of same material.

Strength of Tubular Axles.

To break a tube, power enough must be applied to crush or "buckle" it on one side, before it can open on the opposite side; therefore, unless there is a flaw in the metal (which is nearly impossible, as we test every piece), the Tubular Axle is many times stronger than any other make of Axle, or any part of the wagon.

A Broken Tubular Axle (of proper thickness), such as manufactured by us, can hardly be found; they will invariably stand a heavier strain or shock before springing than will break either a Solid Steel or Hickory Axle of the same estimated capacity. It is well to know in this connection that in case of one being sprung it can be heated and bent back to its original shape in just the same manner as a Solid Axle, and is no more liable to spring at the same place again than at any other point.

Purchasers are not Buying an Experiment.

We began the manufacture of Hollow Axles in 1888, and for twenty years used iron pipe. Since its invention in 1888, we have used Steel Tubing exclusively in all styles of Axles.

All will acknowledge that experience is better than theory; we declare that by scientific tests on level roads, mountain roads and deep mud roads, wagons with the Tubular Axles, properly set, show an average of thirty per cent. lighter draft than the best Solid Axle and Skein Wagons. This is also confirmed by hundreds of drivers and owners of wagons.

Do not confound our goods with the light "re-enforced" Hollow Axle made in imitation of the "Finnegan," and extensively advertised, but secure the old reliable thick steel Tubular Axle Wagons, made by Gas For Fuel.

When gas is used in the kitchen there is no danger of dinner being late, gas is so quick; no danger from a burning chimney; gas does not make soot; the kitchen is always comfortable; the heat from a gas stove being local; no wood or coal to carry in nor ashes to take away. In fact, the advantages from the use of gas are numerous and apparent. Although we have had no severely warm weather this season there has been enough to prove the desirability of having a gas stove installed. Gas costs now only perhaps less, than wood or coal as fuel and the benefits derived more than compensate for the initial cost, that of installation. Drop a post card to J. Smith, manager of the Gas Works, about this matter. He can give you an estimate of cost and short order.

Post-office Receipts.

The business done at the Deseronto post-office during the second quarter of 1900, compared with the corresponding period last year, shows an increase of $1,451.75. The figures are as follows:

NO. 43.

MONSTER ARMY OF A FLEET

Prince Tuan Mobilizes Them Into Many Different Corps.

This Great Military Movement Is On Account of the Appearance of Japanese Troops in China—Foreigners Fleeing to Shanghai—Tuan Also Issues An Edict for a General Rising—Li Hung Chang Leaves Canton to Anarchy.

St. Petersburg, July 18.—A dispatch from the Peking says: Prince Tuan has mobilized 350,000 men and divided them into different corps. The northern corps has been ordered to expel foreigners from Aungh. The Peking army, divided into four corps, was the first to operate against Mukden and occupy the roads between Peking and Shan Tai. The second to concentrate at Tien Tsin and the third at Peking, from whence a column numbering 100,000 will be sent to Wei Hai Wei and Tsin Tsin. The fourth corps will concentrate at Nankin. There are now 25,000 Japanese troops in China.

The Chinese fleet is concentrating in the China Sea, and hostilities are expected. A dispatch from Nanking states that Prince Tuan has ordered great military movements, owing to the appearance of the Japanese fleet. The Japanese fleet has informed the foreign consuls that he cannot be answerable for events in China, Siam, and other parts. The foreigners are fleeing to Shanghai. Their position is alarming. Sixteen foreigners have arrived at Nanking from Nampo, where the houses of foreigners were burned and valuables horribly maltreated. The rebellion has taken hold of southern China. The foreigners at Canton, Hankow, and in China have been attacked and are fleeing panic-stricken.

EDICT FOR GENERAL RISING.

Situation at Shanghai is Growing More Threatening Every Day.

London, July 18.—The Shanghai correspondent of The Express, under date of July 17, cables:

"Prince Tuan has issued an edict to fix a definite date for the rising, under the date is I cannot ascertain, but it is doubtless an early one, for Prince Tuan is stated to have ordered all districts in view of the arrival of more foreign troops. A large body of Chinese troops is reported to be moving from Hopei in the direction of Shanghai. The situation here grows more threatening every day. The city is still without any supplies of food and all the forts are being held by Chinese."

ALL DEPEND ON LI.

Canton Merchants Wept as Li Hung Chang Left For Peking.

Hong Kong, July 17.—Li Hung Chang, disregarding all attempts of Europeans and Chinese to dissuade him, left Canton this morning for Peking. Prior to his departure Chinese merchants and gentry of Canton, Hong Kong, and Shanghai, the Viceroy not to leave, and presented a petition setting forth that Canton, so long the prey to the ravages of the rebels, and a strong hand, and the people enabled to live without being persecuted, when he left, the merchants and gentry, the absence of rebellion and peace being solely due to the presence of Li Hung Chang, the merchants and gentry themselves before the wheels of his chariot to prevent his departure.

Li Hung Chang at Hong Kong.

Brussels, July 18.—The Belgian consul at Hong Kong telegraphs that Li Hung Chang passed here this morning, and that he was going to the north. Before his departure the viceroy had a long interview with the Governor of Hong Kong.

The secretary of the legation at Shanghai telegraphs to-day that according to Chinese information the foreigners in Peking have taken refuge in the palace of Prince Chang.

THE ALLIES IN A DILEMMA.

Although the Area of Rebellion in China is Continuously Extending.

London, July 19.—(14.30)—While evidence accumulates that the rebellion in China has been preparing a formidable military organization in anticipation of the outbreak, the conflict in the area of rebellion is continuously extending, and the allies are in a dilemma. The situation is still deplorable. The Russian has refused Admiral Seydow's request to land over the railway from Tientsin to the coast. The British and the French have refused to do so. The German has refused to do so. The Japanese has refused to do so. The allies are in a dilemma.

Is Germany Grabbing Too?

Still more alarming news has been received from the Daily Express from Tokyo to the effect that the Japanese Government of Germany and Russia to consent to a joint declaration of war against the rebels. The Japanese Government has decided to forward the declaration of war to the Japanese Government to be signed.

What The Standard Says.

The Standard in an editorial states: "It is not surprising to find that the Japanese Government has decided to forward the declaration of war to the Japanese Government to be signed. The Japanese Government has decided to forward the declaration of war to the Japanese Government to be signed."

Germany's Course Appraised.

A similar line of comment is taken by the Standard in its editorial. It states that the German Government is in a dilemma. The German Government is in a dilemma. The German Government is in a dilemma.

Russia Denies It.

The Russian general staff denies the report that the Russian have captured Bagrovichensk, capital of the province of Amur, and it is reported from Tientsin that the Russians have taken Algin.

Killed at Tien Tsin.

The governors of the provinces of Hunan, Peking and Hubei have now jointly proclaimed their armies to Peking. It is announced from Shanghai that Gen. Sun has been killed, but there is no confirmation of the rumor from Tien Tsin.

ADMIRAL SEYMOUR'S ACCOUNT

Of the Capture of Tien Tsin Head By Mr. Brocklebank in the House.

London, July 18.—In the House of Commons today Parliamentary Secretary Brocklebank read a dispatch from Admiral Seymour dated at Taku, July 15, giving an account of the capture of the native city of Tien Tsin by the allied forces. According to this dispatch on the morning of July 14 the Japanese blew up the gate and entered the city, the others following. On the right the Russians captured a battery on the bank of the Liu Tai Canal, consisting of 12 small guns. About 8,000 in all were engaged, and over 200 were killed or wounded. The Japanese being the heaviest losers. The British had 20 killed and 36 wounded. The Chinese troops fled, in what direction is not known.

Germany Shuts China Off.

Berlin, July 18.—It is expected to be announced that Baron Von Buelow, the Imperial Minister of Foreign Affairs, has notified the Chinese legation here that until further notice it cannot be allowed to send telegrams in cipher or secret language from the Chinese legation. CAPTURED 62 GUNS.

German Admiral Tells of Great Work Done By the Allies.

Berlin, July 18.—Admiral Von Buelow, commander of the German squadron, in his account of the fighting at Tien Tsin, dated July 14, says:

"When the citadel was captured 62 guns fell into the hands of the allies."

The German commander says also: "Regular railway communication between Taku and Tien Tsin will be opened on July 18. It was decided to-day that the senior officers on the station should have military control of the line and it will be handed over to the ordinary authorities. The British admiral wished it to be handed to the Russian admiral, who has repaired the line and now occupies it."

CHINA IS AFTER RUSSIA NOW.

Work on the Manchurian Railway Has Been Stopped.

St. Petersburg, July 18.—Reports have been received by the Russian general staff from the Amur district showing that the Chinese have made serious preparations there and are now concentrated on the railway line from Algin to Saghalien. They are well supplied with artillery and have large quantities of munitions. The Russian general, therefore, after reconnoitering the district, returned to Blagoveshensk, capital of the Province of Amur, on Monday.

Cherbin in a Critical State.

Other official reports confirm the serious news of the stoppage of work on the Manchurian Railway, owing to the Chinese attack on the line. The Chinese, who are now concentrated on the railway line from Algin to Saghalien, are well supplied with artillery and have large quantities of munitions. The Russian general, therefore, after reconnoitering the district, returned to Blagoveshensk, capital of the Province of Amur, on Monday.

Russian Sea Troops.

Russian troops have been sent from different points to protect the railway. The Chinese, however, are still working on the eastern section of the line, which gives hope that energetic measures may succeed in restoring order.

Russia Will Command Allies.

In the opinion of the general staff the chief command of the line will be given to the Russian admiral. At present in conjunction with the Japanese commander-in-chief.

China Made a Proposal to Japan to Destroy European Influence.

London, July 18.—The Shanghai correspondent of The Daily Express asserts that he has ascertained from an indiscreet source that when the question of the peace between China and Japan was under discussion last autumn, the Emperor Dowager sent a commissioner to Tokyo with secret proposals to the Mikado.

The commissioner says the correspondence contemplated the conclusion of a secret treaty, having the object of destroying all European influence in China, both China and Japan, the vastness of the area of foreigners and the division of the empire between China and Japan. The Japanese commissioner took a copy prepared by the Chinese and the Japanese commissioner took a copy prepared by the Chinese and the Japanese commissioner took a copy prepared by the Chinese.

It is related of him that he dropped into the business department of the office to-day to make an inquiry about something that had occurred to him, and a young man who had been in his employ only a few months undertook in a loud tone of voice to enlighten him.

"What did you say?" asked Mr. Medill, putting his hand to his ear.

The young man repeated the question in a still louder voice.

"I can't hear you," said the editor.

"Oh, chase yourself around the block, you old granny!" muttered the impatient employee just above his breath.

"I am an old granny," said Mr. Medill, turning away, "and I shall not chase myself around the block."

The fresh young man made immediate arrangements to say goodbye to his job, but the great editor probably thought that the lesson he had received was sufficient and did not disturb him.

A correspondent of the Newcastle Chronicle describes a striking scene witnessed at the breaking up of the vessel Gothenburg off the coast of Northumberland.

The vessel might have been sailing comfortably off at harbor for aught that appeared except that there was no sign of life on board. We had no sooner put foot a deck, however, than we were furiously attacked by swarms of rats.

Great, hungry, lank, lean looking rats, many of them with their tails curled off, swarmed up from below in hundreds and thousands, squeaking and squirting over each other in a manner sickening and horrible to behold.

Those of us who had stepped on deck ran to the rigging, while the others scrambled hurriedly back into the boat. Our position in the rigging was dangerous in the extreme. It was more than one's life was worth to attempt to run the gauntlet of these fierce, starving rodents, and to remain in the rigging was equally impracticable.

At last we cut off some loose ropes, knotted them into convenient lengths and so armed, descended and fought our way through the squealing hordes and eventually succeeded in beating a passage to the boat.

It seemed as if the rats knew the impending fate of the vessel, for they no sooner saw us over the side than they began to swarm down the ropes and try to enter the boat. It was with difficulty that we could beat them off before casting clear. And they squealed in a horrible manner as we waded away.

A few hours later the Gothenburg City went to pieces.

Notified.
The head of the household was late getting home. He was very late. It was long past midnight. Indeed the little clock on the hall mantel had just struck 3 o'clock when he came walking in. He had been out with the boys, and his wife reproached him.

"Why, it's early yet. It's not late." Just then the clock sounded one, two, three.

The wife looked at him with grim rebuke. He caught her eye and jerked out this reply:

"Well, now, if you want to believe that darned $1.50 clock before your dear husband, it's all right."

It was a similar occasion, only more so. At this time he was a little drunker than usual. His step was unsteady, but he had not lost his courteous manners. She met him at the front, weeping reproachfully.

"Oh, John," she pleaded, "what makes you do this way?"

"You are hic—so awfully pretty—hic," he said, making an extravagant bow and kissing her, "that I like to—hic—to see you double."

And she put him tenderly to bed, bathed his forehead with cold water, and forgot about the scolding she had fully determined to administer to him.

Trapped the Trapper.
In "Sketches of Life in the Golden State" Colonel Albert S. Evans narrates the rash exploit of an over-sanguine bear hunter:

A venturesome Yankee came to Santa Barbara some years ago, and soon became an adept at throwing the lasso. Hearing the Mexican cowboys talk of lassoing the grizzly bear, he decided to show them what it could do in that time if he ever got a chance.

One day he came upon a grizzly in a favorable location. He threw the lasso with skillful aim and reeled back his trembling body to save the bear an astonishment, when the bear—which is always attached to the sound of the saddle—came up to him.

Judge of the man's astonishment when that bear quietly assumed a sitting posture, took hold of the lasso and began to draw it in hand over hand!

The hapless descendant of the pilgrim fathers stuck to the horse and saddle until he saw the slack all drawn in and the bear and the horse coming rapidly together. Then, in a panic, he descended and ran to a tree, abandoning the horse to its fate.

Two skillful men, operating from opposite sides, can master a bear and choke him between them, but with only one man, one horse and one bear, it is another story.

Sty Joking in the Pulpit.
"Before I went to college," said a minister at a certain charge one summer, in the Methodist church we had service morning and evening. There was a Presbyterian church in the village, and the pastor from another village supplied it, preaching there once a Sunday in the afternoon. I went to hear him one afternoon. He was a college bred man and was supposed to be away up. When he spied me in the congregation, he came down and asked me to assist in the opening exercises.

When we were seated, he asked me to read the first lesson and at the same time announced that it was a certain chapter in the book of Numbers. Just before I was to read I reached up to the desk and took down the Bible and opened at the place. I glanced down over the chapter and saw that it was a mass of unpronounceable names. I knew that he was working a joke on me. He knew that I could not get away with these names. I said nothing, but when the time came I stood up and announced the chapter following and read it.

When I sat down, he gave me a look, and got one back. I whispered hoarsely, "I guess not." Those were the only words spoken on this subject."—Utica Observer.

"Quick Lunches."
It is the habit of the modern time saving young man, says Elmer Gregory in The Atlantic, upon entering a quick lunch establishment to dash for the bill of fare and give an order (if he is in a hurry) to catch one of the maids on the fly before removing either coat or hat. At least 15 seconds may be economized in this way. Once seated, the luncheon falls to on anything at hand—bread, cold, raw, crackers or catchers. When the dish ordered arrives, he gets his fork into it as it appears over his shoulder and cleans the plate before the sauce makes its appearance, so that is eaten by itself or with bread.

Cups of coffee or tea go down in two swallows. Little piles of cake are cut in quarters and disappear in four mouthfuls, much after the fashion of children down the ogre's throat in the mechanical toy, mastication being either a lost art or considered a foolish waste of energy.

A really accomplished luncheon can assimilate his last "quarter" of cakes, wiggle into his coat and pay his check at the desk in the same moment. The next he is down the block in pursuit of a receding trolley.

Won on a Bluff.
"It does me good to meet up with one of that class of people who think they know it all," said the old man with the ancient hat. "I was coming over from Baltimore on a train the other day, and a man who was writing in a book asked me how to spell 'proper.' I told him, but he knew it all who sat next disrupted me. I bet him $10 even up that I was right and proved I was by four disinterested men. I gave the $10 to charity."

"How did the man content the word should be spelled?" was asked.

"Why, he said there was only one 'p' in it."

"And you stuck for two, eh?"

"Well, I insisted that it was spelled at 'proper,' and he finally owned up like a little man and handed me over the money."

"And would you like to make the same wager again and leave it to the dictionary?"

"Not much." I consulted 'em all next day and discovered that I had bluffed that poor chap out of his wealth."—Washington Post.

Heartless Man.
"Dear," said the dying man, "I don't want you to go into mourning for me when I am gone."

"Oh, George," she sobbed, "Don't be so hard upon me."

"Hard? Why, love, I simply want you to be happy. You are young yet. Why should you deck yourself with widow's weeds?"

"It's mean of you, George. You know black is so becoming to me."—Catholic Standard and Times.

How Expresses Drop Men.
"While on my way from Chicago last week," said a prominent business man to a Mail and Express reporter, "I noticed a peculiar railroad custom which interested me considerably. I happened to be in the last car of the train when the train stopped in a desolate spot between stations. The rear brakeman, of course, dropped off and went down the track with a flag to warn any train that might be following us. In a moment or two we started up again, but amidst the brakeman. I wondered at this, but was still more surprised later on to see the same thing repeated when we were obliged to stop on account of a threatened train. Upon inquiry I found that this was the custom on fast trains. 'Some times, if we have lots of time,' said the conductor, 'we whistle for the men to come in, but in those cases we leave them to be picked up by the next train or to walk to the nearest station.'"

"But isn't that rather hard on the men?" I asked. "Oh, it's all part of the business," he replied. "I have known of cases where men dropped off the train and were frozen to death by wayward by crabs, but the railroads have to make the time, and that's why it is done. I have seen trains running with only a conductor aboard them at times because the rest of the crew had been left behind in just this way."

Vanity and Curiosity.
Vanity seems to spring eternal in the human breast, and the less it has to do with the more it thrives apparently.

The other day a tramp of high degree in vagrancy stopped before the window of a house at which two young women were standing. He was tattered and torn and melancholy looking to such an extent that he aroused a feeling of deep sympathy in the hearts of the maidens, who looked down upon him as he gazed intently at some object he held in his hand.

"I wonder what he has," said the sentimental one of the two as she peered down on him. "A lock of some woman's hair, I shouldn't wonder."

"More likely a coin he's found; he looks pleased," rejoined the practical one scoffingly as she maneuvered for a position that would reveal the object to her.

But it was neither, they discovered. It was just a pair of looking glasses, in which the man was surveying his features with a satisfied air, that told of his entire contentment with his very rugged physiognomy.

Which shows, as was said at the beginning of the story, that the springs eternal in the masculine breast just as curiosity does in the feminine.

A Friend in Need.
It happened in the early days of Australia's history when bushranging was common.

A gentleman was riding along a lonely track through the bush when he heard loud cries for help proceeding from a neighboring grove. Arriving at the spot whence proceeded the cries, he was surprised and shocked to find a man securely tied to a tree.

"What is the matter here?" he asked. "Oh, sir," replied the poor fellow, "I'm so glad you have come! A few hours ago I was stuck up by bushrangers, who rifled my pockets, and, after stealing everything I had except a bundle of notes in my inside breast pocket, which they fortunately overlooked, bound me to this tree and decamped."

"The scoundrels!" ejaculated the newcomer. "Look everything you had except a bundle of notes in your inside pocket, eh?"

"Yes, sir."

"The villains! And then they tied you so tightly that you cannot escape?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then I'll take the notes the other fellows left!" And he did.—London Answers.

Embarrassing.
When the new minister, a handsome and unmarried man, made his first pastoral call at the Fossdicks', he took little Anna up in his arms and tried to kiss her. But the child refused to be kissed. She struggled loose and ran off into the next room, where her mother was putting a few finishing touches to her adornment before going into the parlor to greet the clergyman.

"Mamma," the little girl whispered, "the man in the parlor wanted me to kiss him."

"Well," replied mamma, "why didn't you let him? I would if I were you."

Thereupon little Anna ran back into the parlor, and the minister asked:

"Well, little lady, won't you kiss me now?"

"No, I won't," replied Anna promptly, "but mamma says she will!"—Harper's Bazar.

The Boudoir Kicked.
A comical story is told of an English nobleman who is shortsighted. In a railroad train, while he was sitting next to a very stout old woman, friend on the next seat accosted him. "Walt in mine," said the old lady, "I'll put this bundle of rags in the rack and you can sit here." And to the astonishment and horror of the gigantic female he caught her round the waist before he realized his mistake.

Expensive Furniture.
"One of the special agents of the Indian bureau is a woman, and she receives a salary of $8 a day," read Mr. Wintergreen.

"She must sell a good many," commented Mrs. Wintergreen. "But I shouldn't have thought there was such a demand for that sort of a bureau."—Detroit Free Press.

Small kindnesses, small courtesies, small considerations, habitually practiced in our social intercourse, give a greater charm to the character than the display of great talents and accomplishments.

Next to the Lowest Bidder.
"Said contract to go to the next to the lowest bidder" is the way that a local building contractor would have the closing sentence read in advertisements for bids on any particular job. While speaking of the matter recently this same contractor said that if the truth were known nine out of ten of the lowest bids made are made through a mistake in the calculations of the bidder.

"If the contractor who gets the job was aware that his bid is oftentimes $1,000 below the next lowest above him, and this on a comparatively small job, he would immediately institute a search and find where he had made the mistake, thus having an opportunity of failing to qualify to complete the job. This privilege is often denied the bidder, however, and he gets well along with his work before the fact dawns upon him that he is on a losing venture. It is then too late to go back on the job, and the result is that the party who is doing the building and the contractors also are losers, and this because of the natural inclination of the contractor to shrink in order not to lose any more than he is absolutely obliged to in order to get out on the bad deal.

These mistakes are not only disastrous to the parties immediately concerned, but to the trade in general, as by the error of the unlucky bidder another worthy contractor is unable to get the work at reasonable figures. Give the work to the lowest bidder, I believe to be a good general rule."

His Only Confidant.
The old pilot of the little steamer Maid of the Mist, which used to carry passengers quite up to the foot of the falls of Niagara until the mist from the falling waters drenched the clothing of every one on board, used to perpetuate one solitary confidant each trip. It always commenced and ended the same.

Moving his hand along the sides of the pilot house and examining the wood-work minutely, he would look up mysteriously and remark:

"I say, stranger, do you know what this boat is made of?"

"Made of? Why, pine and oak, isn't she?"

"No, sir."

"Hemlock?"

"No."

"Isn't cedar, is it?"

"Oh, no!"

And then the old pilot's eyes twinkled and his mouth whistled a crazy tune.

"Well, iron perhaps?"

"No."

"What in thunder is she made of, then?"

"She's made of the Mist, stranger! Maid of the Mist."

Then the pilot accepted his morning cigar.

He Was Very Charitable.
An amusing story is told in connection with the late...

The Old Reliable Remedy for Diarrhea and Dysentery.

Grandma Mrs. Thos. Sherlock, Annapolis, Ont., recently wrote:
"My little girl, three years of age, was taken very bad with diarrhea, and we thought we were going to lose her, when I remembered that my grandmother always used Dr. Fowler's Wild Strawberry, and often said that it saved her life. I got a bottle and gave it to my child, and after the third dose she began to get better and slept well that night. She improved right along and was soon completely cured."

These mistakes are not only disastrous to the parties immediately concerned, but to the trade in general, as by the error of the unlucky bidder another worthy contractor is unable to get the work at reasonable figures. Give the work to the lowest bidder, I believe to be a good general rule."

The lady in charge requested a gift for this purpose from a well known and wealthy gentleman in the city, but one not famous for "parting." To her surprise she received next day a note to the effect that he was sending her a sirloin of beef and "two" ox tongues.

The same morning the lady happened to go to her butcher (who was also the butcher of Mr. X.), and after giving him a large order for her stall, asked him if he would like himself to give anything.

"I should very much, ma'am," replied the worthy tradesman, "but I yesterday gave to Mr. X., at his request for this purpose, a sirloin of beef and three ox tongues."

Net gain to Mr. X.: One ox tongue and a cheap reputation for charity.—London Standard.

A Cable With a History.
The cable of the Western Union Telegraph company which runs under Lake Champlain from Ticonderoga to Larrabee Point has something of a history. It was made in Europe and was first used in connecting opposite shores of the Red sea. From there it was brought to Hilton Head, where it was used in connecting that place with Ybee Island, near Beaufort, S. C. At the close of the civil war it was taken up and carried to New York city, where it remained for several years in the company storehouse before it was placed where it now is.

A Serious Accident.

On Wednesday Walter Geiger had his right hand caught in a planer at the door factory. The accident happened so quickly no person seems to know how it happened. The hand was smashed and torn and completely severed at the wrist. Dr. Newton attended the injured man and amputated the hand.

We know of no worse sensation than to be in a hurry and find our path obstructed by some one who is very slow. —Atchison Globe.

Wheat in Chicago Continues on the Down Grade—Drop of a Cent—The Latest Quotations.

Liverpool, July 19.—Yesterday wheat futures declined 3d per cent.

Chicago, July 19.—Yesterday witnessed a further decided extension of the reactionary movement in wheat. The heavy season had the advantage, and after holding firm for a good part of the day futures broke 15c to 15c per bushel. Almost all crops caused long and short selling, and the close was at the bottom prices of the day.

Following were the closing prices at important wheat centers yesterday:

Irate Father—Well, isn't that enough? What more do you want?
Young Man—If it isn't too much trouble, sir, I would like that piece of cloth.

DESERONTO, ONT., FRIDAY, JULY 27, 1900.

NO. 44.

SIR ROBERT HART DIED JULY 2

No Doubt Now That Ministers and Their Families are Dead.

Stories Given to the Consul at Shanghai by Shiao Were Only Intended to Give the Chinese Time to Prepare for War with the European Nations. How the Government Destroyed - Li Hung Chang's Work.

London, July 26. (4 a.m.) — Mr. Conger's letter, the substance of which has been transmitted to the United States Secretary of the Navy, through Capt. Thomas, of the United States, cruiser Brooklyn, has increased the belief in London that there is no hope for the foreign legations in Peking and that the elaborate fabric of the despatches which the Chinese are building up, spreading the civilized world, that the Ministers are still alive is only intended to enable them to gain time to complete preparations for warfare.

Several of the News. The Shanghai correspondent of The Daily Mail asserts that a Chinaman, who was employed at the British legation as a waiter, had been seen to escape from Peking to Nanchang.

SIR ROBERT HART.

wang and that he declares that at the time he left Peking most of the members of the legations were dead and thousands of others were hopelessly. He says that Sir Robert Hart, director of Chinese Imperial Maritime Customs, died on July 2.

Even Chinese Admit It.

The correspondent goes on to say: "No other dates are given in the message from Nanchang. The leading Chinese newspapers here published yesterday a despatch declaring that it was all over with the members of the legations."

The president of a minor board at Peking under date of July 9, saying: "The foreign legations were destroyed, but owing to the daily fighting it is reported that only about 30 persons are left alive in the Chinese capital. There is any delay in the arrival of the relief force, I fear that none will be left to receive it."

This letter is regarded as showing an authentic. Strange enough, it says nothing of any assistance to the legations by Prince Ching or Gen. Li. This letter is regarded in Shanghai as authentic. Strange enough, it says nothing of any assistance to the legations by Prince Ching or Gen. Li.

What Chinese are Doing.

While these brief glimpses as to the fate of the legations leaves little ground for hope, Shanghai sends a batch of reports indicative of preparations for hostilities on the part of the Chinese. It is alleged that Yangtze riverboats have sent depictions to Shanghai to inquire as to the prospect of raising a foreign loan, ostensibly to pursue military operations against the Boxers, whose movements are extending rapidly southward, with constantly growing strength and have reached a point where the provinces of Shantung, Honan and Shanxi meet, leaving behind a trail of burnt missions and murdered Christians.

Will Oppose Foreign Advance.

Simultaneously there is a movement northward of southern Chinese troops to join the main army which is to oppose the foreign advance in Peking. The strength of this principal force is now estimated at 200,000 men.

Chinese Are Preparing.

It is believed that another two or three weeks must elapse before the Chinese preparations are completed. It is reported that the new Chinese troops and more guns are being sent to reinforce the garrison of the Kiangsi forts, threatening the entrance to the Yangtze river, 60 miles east of Nanking.

Black and White Destroyed.

Changtong, vicar of Wuhsung, on the Yangtze river, reports that he is apprehensive that he will not be able to restrain his troops from more than another ten days. He says he has thrown the breach block and the guns commanding Hankow into the river.

Li Hung Chang's Work.

Those signs of unrest in the southern provinces are interpreted with Li Hung Chang's presence in Shanghai. They are supposed to be the beginning of a general declaration against foreigners. In this connection the Canton correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, writing Tuesday, sends the following interesting news: "Victory Tak Su today published the following mandate:

"An important imperial decree was issued on the 23rd day of the sixth month. It says: We have had Tien Tsin and great preparations are taken in Peking. No peace can be obtained without going into a war. In the time of Chang an agreement was made that no further can be inflicted upon the Chinese. It is a month since the Minister of Germany was assassinated by Boxers and strikers. It has been given for the arrest of the murderers. We are trying our utmost to preserve the lives of other Ministers and they are still in Peking. We fear that the viceroys and governors may misunderstand the intention of these Ministers as a ground for making peace and taking no heed whatever to prepare for attack and defense. The neglect to pacify the districts under the jurisdiction will bring serious calamity. Viceroys and Governors are to pay all attention to and to urge on preparations for coast attack and defense and they are to take the consequences in case of any territory being lost entirely through their failure and mismanagement."

"Europeans here understand fairly the last part of the edict, which means that the viceroys and governors are summoned by the Emperor Dowager to prepare for the war against the allied powers. Victory Tak Su is already in action, and he is increasing his army and armaments. He has issued an edict to the effect that he will collect from the prefect of Kwang Chow to four small garrisons, two French, one American and one British, that are here to safeguard the lives of foreigners, and he asks that they be moved beyond the Bogue Forts."

When the Powers Get the News.

"The plans will be unmasked shortly. At the other powers' secretaries definitely the facts concerning the massacre at Peking. Chinese emissaries into the channels at the back of the Shanghai, and the Chinese emissaries are waiting orders at the Imperial Government wharves. Chinese are daily becoming more hostile, and the situation is critical. Business is almost at a standstill, and property and plague with fresh victims daily. Victory Tak Su says that the notorious Black Flag chief, Luo, who induced reverses on the French in the Tonkin war, now refuses to obey Li Hung Chang's command to go north and fight the Boxers. His soldiers are here, and are among the crew of the gunboats in the Shanghai."

Li Hung Chang Is With Liu.

According to the Shanghai correspondent of The Times, Li Hung Chang is residing at the residence of Liu, who was the envoy of the Empress Dowager in the secret mission to Japan. He has received secret instructions to remain at Shanghai and to endeavor to open negotiations with a view of preventing the European advance.

Wrangling Among the Powers.

With this accumulation of evidence of an impending big struggle, comes also the news of disagreements between the powers. The powers are commanders, which threaten to hamper united action and to encourage Chinese resistance. A conference of the admirals is taking place in London, the question regarding the management of the restored railway, decided in favor of Russian control, only the British and American admirals dissenting.

The Tien Tsin correspondent of The Daily Mail insists upon the necessity of a united effort at the general headquarters, with an intelligence office.

Nothing Reliable From Manchuria.

"Nothing appears to be a difficulty, owing to the Russian censorship, to get an accurate idea of the situation in Manchuria. There are rumors that the Russian situation is more serious than it is officially represented to be, and that the Russians have been driven back, while trying to save the southern portion of the Eastern Railway."

Chinese Have Burned Liaoang.

The Chinese have burned Liaoang to prevent Russian concentration there and are now trying to smash communication between Port Arthur and Nanchang. The critical situation has forced the Russians to withdraw a number of troops from Tien Tsin, while 3,000 troops have been sent from Port Arthur.

It is reported that an entire army corps is being sent to the coast for transportation to Taku by the volunteer fleet.

It is reported from Nanchang that the Russians are concentrating forces at a point 15 miles east of that fort, and are awaiting reinforcements before advancing on Moukden, Manchuria. The Boxers have wrecked the bridges of the Shanghai Kwan and Kichuan section of the railway. Admiral Gertzel is consulting at Wei Hai Wei.

Another Message From Conger.

Washington, July 26. — It develops that one of the State Department's cipher code books has been stolen. It is thought it has fallen into the hands of the Chinese Government.

Just as Expected.

Washington, July 26. — The following cablegram has been received at the Navy Department: "The Boxers have wrecked the bridges of the Shanghai Kwan and Kichuan section of the railway."

Written message signed Conger, dated July 4, received Tien Tsin, 24th, says: "Chinese soldiers, general massacre by Chinese soldiers. Who are shelling location daily. Relief soon if all City with determined resistance all for Emperor Peking. Extra relief force into city probably to be sent out."

The message comes from Captain Charles M. Thomas, commander of the Brooklyn.

President Xian Xian's Communication.

Kingston, Ja., July 26. — Private cables received here yesterday announce the renomination of President Xian Xian, of the Chinese Government, is practically certain. He has held the office three terms already.

THOSE CANADIAN SOLDIERS.

Gen. Eaton, Bisley Commandant, Is Looking After Them.

Desire to Return to Canada—Telegraphic Report From Lord Strathcona as to the Men at Netley Hospital—Not Believed at Ottawa That Canadians Had to Sleep in the Open and Go Hungry.

London, July 26.—General Eaton has made arrangements with General Trotter, commanding the London district, to supply the needs of the invalid Canadians. General Eaton was accompanied by Bisley, and has taken an active interest in the young soldiers from Canada, who have been in the front line in South Africa.

The Canadian short of funds must blame themselves, as they failed to exercise economy.

U.S.A. Shows Nothing of It.

Ottawa, July 26.—Nothing is known at military headquarters of the alleged cases of desolate Canadians belonging to the Canadian contingents in London, and still less is it believed. Members of the Canadian contingents in London are in England under orders, and any such, sleeping in the parks, must have broken leave or have been sent without leave in order to do so. In this case they will be taken care of by the military authorities.

Have Them £10 a Week.

Fifteen members of the Canadian contingents now in England received £10 sterling apiece at the hands of Lord Strathcona yesterday morning on account of deferred pay. This is the result of a correspondence between Lord Strathcona and the High Commissioner. It was pointed out that several of those invalided home were practically well when they reached England and might like to take some leave to see London. Under these circumstances Lord Strathcona asked if he might advance money on account of the deferred pay voted by the Canadian Parliament. To this Col. Plimmet replied that as a number of the men had assigned their pay, it would be advisable to see that they were clear on the books, and advised that in any case the names should be submitted to the department before the advance was made. Lord Strathcona replied by submitting 15 names, none of whom had assigned, and they to-day drew their money.

JUSTICE IN HAIL.

Judicial procedure in Haiti is in certain instances not untouched by humor. A Haitian once asked a judge, in judgment requiring the Haitian to pay $1 a week into court was given, and the trader was to send a messenger every week to the magistrate for the money. In due time he sent for the first installment and was informed that the Haitian had not paid up, but that he should be thrown into prison for his failure.

Three weeks passed with the same result. On morning the Haitian came to the trader's store. He was, he said, a poor man, and he had no money. What good, he asked, would accrue to the trader if he, the poor man, was thrown into prison? Let the trader forgive him his debt, and then thereby untold rewards in a future state.

After some talk the trader gave him a letter of release, which he went off to present to the magistrate. The magistrate was so kind that he was struck by the bad grace with which the magistrate had treated him, and he forthwith returned to the trader and asked him if he had received the $8 he had given him for his debt. The trader looked surprised and said he had received nothing.

"Then, since you have remitted the debt, that $8 is mine," said the Haitian.

Accordingly, he went off to the court to present his claim. The magistrate at once committed him to prison. A consul who had heard the story asked the magistrate why he had thrown the Haitian into prison for it.

"For contempt of court," was the reply.

The First Cookbook.

To the Romans being the honor of having produced the first European cookery book, the author of the "First Cookbook" is generally attributed to Caelius Apicius, who lived under Trajan, 114 A. D. Here are two recipes from this ancient collection:

"First, for a sauce to be eaten with meat, but not the following ingredients into a mortar: Aniseed, dried mint and lazer root; cover them with vinegar, add dates and pour in ligumens to a distilled liquor made from large fish which were salted and allowed to turn purple in the sun, and add a small quantity of mustard seeds. Reduce all to a proper thickness with sweet wine warmed, and then pour this same over your chicken, which should previously be boiled in unsalted water."

The second recipe shows the same queer mixture of ingredients: "Take a wheelbarrow of rose leaves and pound in a mortar; add to it brains of two pigs and two thrushes boiled and mixed with the chopped up yolk of egg, vinegar, pepper and salt. Mix and pour these together and stew them steadily and slowly till the perfume is developed."—Chambers' Journal.

One France a Shot.

When the troops of the French and festive little parties of overconfident inhabitants of the city swarmed into the suburbs to see the French outposts, there was among the latter a good deal of rivalry in the trade of laying down traps and snares for those civilian sharpshooters who bought shot at a franc a shot at the enemy's outposts.

Surgeon General Gordon, who represented the medical department of the British army during the war, speaks in a book he wrote, of the French outposts, that the French outposts, there was among the latter a good deal of rivalry in the trade of laying down traps and snares for those civilian sharpshooters who bought shot at a franc a shot at the enemy's outposts.

"A Woman's Rights Person."

An old Virginia gentleman arose in a car the other day and with a great flourish of his stomach had offered his seat to a beautiful and handsomely dressed woman.

"Take my seat, madam," he politely requested. The lady demurred. "Take my seat, I beg of you, madam," he insisted. "I could not allow a lady to stand, unless I added under his breath, 'she was one of those women's rights people.'"

The lady blushed visibly. "I," she said in a freezing tone—"I am a woman's rights person."

"Take my seat just the same, madam," said the gallant old gentleman smilingly. "You are too good looking to be suspected of it if you hadn't confessed,"—Leslie's Weekly.

One Too Many For Him.

"Ha, ha! They served that fellow right," exclaimed Mrs. Hennepe as she finished reading the report of a bigamy case.

"What is it, my dear?" asked her husband.

"He was arrested and very promptly jailed because he took one wife too after me next!"

Easily Forgotten.

"Can't you remember the principal acts of your various mayors?" asked the man who was trying to compile a history of the city.

"Not very well," apologetically replied the other. "Our mayors are so short lived, you know, they don't make much impression on the memory. They go in one year and out the other."

The Very Henson.

"Dolly, what name you have filled on your hat? They'll be out of style in a few weeks."

"How funny you are, Polly! You asked me a question and then answered it yourself."

THANKFUL MOTHERS

Hundreds of Letters Received From Grateful Mothers Whose Children are Cured of a Common Weakness.

Many children are troubled with weak kidneys in the room of nocturnal urinating, which is very hard to treat. It debilitates them; it causes them to be nervous, and it is more than ordinary work. A remedy that is harmless but positive in checking this will greatly interest many mothers.

Mrs. Robert Thompson, No. 63 McGee street, Toronto, says this of Dr. Fitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets: "I gave them to one of my children that had always been afflicted with weak kidneys. It was one of the greatest discouragements, yet the result is most satisfactory. I used Dr. Fitcher's Tablets for my back, and suffered from pain and lameness, dull headaches, annoyance from the kidney secretions, and an exhausting feeling of nervousness. These Tablets removed the whole difficulty and encouraged me to give them to my child. With this evidence I have no hesitancy in recommending Dr. Fitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets."

Mrs. F. Baxter, No. 170 Bolton Ave., Toronto, says: "I have a child that suffers from a weakness of the kidneys that I found impossible to relieve. Beyond the embarrassment of the matter, it caused him to be depressed, particularly mornings, requiring the greatest effort on the part of the child to resist. It caused him much anxiety. As other remedies had failed, I decided to try Dr. Fitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets; for what I read of them I thought them adapted for the case. The result has been a positive cure. I am grateful, and a depressing burden has been lifted from the child. All Druggists,

OZONE is the new treatment for diseases produced by germs. Hay Fever is a germ disease and cannot be successfully cured by drug medicines. Drugs only stupify, while OZONE kills the germs. Many sufferers find relief from Hay Fever by a change of climate. Why is this? It is on account of the "OZONE" in the air. It is this pure OZONE in liquid form when you buy POWLEY'S LIQUID OZONE. It positively cures
the most obstinate forms of Hay Fever.

Ask your nearest Druggist for Booklet containing all particulars about the new treatment.

Tyndinaga Sunday School Picnic.

The natural bravery of the Mohawks was displayed at a market docked Tuesday morning, for notwithstanding the heavy rains during the night and early morning and the lowering aspect of the sky, they braved the elements, turning out in large numbers, with the determination to participate in the annual outing of the Tyndinaga Reserve Sunday School, and enjoy themselves. Long before the good steamer Ella Ross arrived, the dock was lined with a large and happy concourse of the aborigines of this fair Canada of ours, and a healthy, happy-looking, well-dressed crowd they were, of all ages ranging from a few weeks old to nearly five score years.
About 8 o'clock we were aboard and the steamer crossed over to Foresters Island Park where more passengers were taken on, then another stop was made at the landing stage on the Reserve, but only a few could be taken on as the boat had her full complement of passengers. Regret was felt by those who could not go, but to be left behind, and we feel sure that Captain Christie's tender heart suffered a pang in being obliged by the inexorable laws governing navigation to deny them the pleasures of the day.
As the steamer proceeded on her way to Twelve O'clock Point the railroad and the day brightened up wonderfully, the country on both sides of the bay looking beautiful after the refreshing rains, and the extensive view of the lake and the ever-changing panorama. Shortly before noon the picnicers debarked at their destination and soon the tables in the woods were loaded with tempting viands, which as usual on such occasions, disappeared with marvellous rapidity, but the supply seemed inexhaustible. The day was enjoyment of the day a merry-go-round had been engaged and was well patronized
by the children of the Tyndinaga Sunday School, and the delighted children of St. John's Sunday school, Belleville, who held their picnic there.
Games were indulged in and there was no less than a foot and a half of Church Lad's Brigade, but time would not permit of it. The Royal Mohawk Band were also in compliment to the extensive music and dancing was throughout the day. Shortly before 4 o'clock all were on board and the return trip was commenced, and it was no less enjoyable than the outward one. The candy and ice cream stands, on the main deck did a rushing business, these good things being in great demand.

At 7:35 p. m. the Ella Ross was again moored at the Deseronto dock, and a stream of tired but happy picnicers flowed over the gangway, satisfied, yet wishing it could be all over again. It is seldom the privilege of a steamer to carry such an orderly and well-behaved excursion party as that of the Tyndinaga Sunday School picnic of 1900.

A New Canadian Star.
The New York Mirror (a dramatic paper) contains a fine portrait of a young lady of Campbellford, and makes reference to her in twilights
as follows:

"Marie Hunt, who is now playing Julie de Noctelle in 'A Day of Reckoning' at the Star Theatre, is a young Canadian who has done some excellent work in the various stock companies.
Her impersonation of Julie has received the endorsement of the press where-ever she has appeared. Her gown have called for the admiration of the ladies and her appearance at all times has been remarked as one of refinement."

"Marie Hunt has been engaged by Harry Cogan Clarke to originate the leading female role in his new farce
'What Did Tomkins Do?' Miss Hunt will play for Paris shortly to secure the latest things in Parisian costume."

The young lady referred to is Miss Minnie Callaghan, daughter of Thos.
Callaghan, the well-known Campbell-ford manager for The Rathbun Co.

pushing, successful, and there's a reason why Deseronto people do more trading here than anywhere else.

Shoppers, hardly need reminding that we have everything for which there's a demand.

ment. See how we have succeeded.

Arsenic of Hastings.
The shareholders of the Atlas
Arsenic Mining Company, of Cleveland, were to have met in the city yesterday afternoon. The meeting did not take place, owing to the absence of the secretary, who could not reach the place in time. The meeting took place this afternoon at Delora.

W. A. Hungerford, who is a member of the company, in conversation with the Ontario yesterday, said they had every reason to be proud over the result of their work. Last month the output of their mine amounted to $80,000. The company intend to put in some of the latest machinery at once for the reduction of arsenic and concentrates and expect that the monthly output will be greatly increased.

The output of arsenic in North Hastings promises to be greater than of any country in the world. The owners of the property will no doubt realize a handsome profit from this important mineral—Belleville Ontario.
